To evaluate the efficacy of pattern recognition analysis in detecting progression of keratoconus in cases with subtle and asymmetrical alterations on conventional topography. This retrospective review was carried out at Hospital Clinic, Barcelona, Spain, from 2006 to 2016. Subjects with asymmetrical keratoconus, central corneal thickness of 580 to 690 µm, and best-corrected visual acuity of 20/40 or better were included. All eyes were imaged with a rotating Scheimpflug camera (Pentacam, Oculus Optikgerate AG, Wetzlar, Germany) and with the Pentacam rotating Scheimpflug camera with the Scheimpflug TomoMap software version 1.0. All topographies were analyzed for pattern recognition analysis using the Estimation of Corneal Aberrations (ECA) software (version 1.0). The index of progression was defined as the highest annual progression at 1.5 D, as calculated by the index of progression. This index of progression was correlated with the index of progression in the central keratoconus subgroup (Fuchs endothelial dystrophy excluded), as well as with clinical, astigmatic, and refractive parameters. Forty-six eyes of 27 patients were included. The mean index of progression in the ECA-indexed keratoconus subgroup was 1.50 ± 0.46 . Forty-four of the 46 eyes (96%) had an index of progression > 0.5 . The strongest index of progression was 1.84 ± 0.80 at a mean follow-up of 42.8 ± 17.3 months. A positive correlation between the index of progression and clinical, astigmatic, and refractive parameters was noted. The best-corrected visual acuity improved in all patients. The index of progression was the strongest parameter related with progression in the ECA-indexed keratoconus subgroup and was strongly correlated with the visual acuity. Pattern recognition analysis is useful in detecting progression when subtle and asymmetrical changes are present in patients with normal central corneal thickness. J.B.D. Moura José Bas e79caf774b

We describe Grus (Chrysotis) youngi sp. nov. from the Belqeen-Oughlaj Gorge, south of the Chimkent River, south-eastern Republic of Uzbekistan. The new species belongs to the 'gray-headed and banded' group of species, represented in Central Asia by only one other species, Ch. itata. It differs from all other species in the group by a number of anatomical and biogeographical features, most notably the gray head coloration, faint barring on the flank, and the more extensive wing-filling beneath the primary coverts and secondaries. It also differs from Ch. itata in the set of biometric measurements, body proportions and barring patterns.Last updated on.From the section Women's Cricket England beat South Africa by nine wickets to take an unassailable 2-0 lead in the Ashes England beat South Africa by nine wickets to take an unassailable 2-0 lead in the Ashes. The tourists won the toss and captain Heather Knight, who was rested for Friday's play after nine Tests, opened the batting. South Africa - who made a losing 1-0 tour in England two years ago - then scored 281-6 from their 50 overs, with 19 extras. England opener Jess Cameron scored a quick-fire half-century as she reached her tenth Test half-century at 10.22. Cameron added 114 for the fourth wicket with opener Alex Hales (29) before hitting a half-century of her own, finishing unbeaten on 74. England's Chris Jordan also found early form as she
