City of Hillsboro issues
'Spiritual Emergency' alert September 11, 2009 By By

HILLSBORO, Ore. (AP) — Authorities in the central Oregon city of Hillsboro are warning people to be on the lookout for a man who has sent bogus text messages saying he is planning to sneak into homes and kill a person to "bring back to life" his dead daughter. The Oregonian reports that the Hillsboro Police Department on Friday urged residents to stay alert for Andrew Robert McGregor, who also goes by the names of Danny LaCoush and Danny Young. McGregor has threatened to kill a person at each of the homes where he has received the phone messages, police said. Authorities warned that whoever receives the text messages "must contact their local law enforcement immediately." McGregor's 13-year-old daughter died in 2006 and he asked that her spirit be revived in May. The police say it's unclear what, if any, connection he has with Hillsboro. apart from his mother, who drinks it. In Slovenia, he describes himself as a "slovene who drinks cider", someone who wouldn't dream of buying supermarket ciders. But he has begun to crave them again and wants to learn to drink them straight from the bottle. "Slovenia is a poor country," he said. "We're not used to drinking strong liquids. We prefer to drink light beverages such as beer, beer and beer." But Florian, who works for the British consulate in Ljubljana, has changed that and introduced
