You can download.Q: Dependency object creation I have written a small console application in which I am creating objects at run time and passing them to another window (con) which is my main application. This con is a main form and contains several buttons and a combo box. To my surprise, when I view the properties of the objects that have been created at runtime by the con I am getting null values for the properties. I see this behavior only when I create a new object in the run time. If I assign the values directly (instead of creating a new object) it works fine. Here is the
