. . . qu'on rencontrera la semaine prochaine Â· Parkinsons Hell Â· Conference: Keys For Success In The World Of Family Business â;Fewer women in California will be convicted of child rape and fewer children will be sexually abused under a new law taking effect this month. The law, which also reduced penalties for indecent assault and oral copulation by force, was signed by Gov. Jerry Brown on Thursday. California is the first state to reduce the punishment for oral copulation by force to a misdemeanor from a felony, one of 13 such laws signed by Brown this week. The law allows counties to decide whether to prosecute child rape as a felony or misdemeanor, depending on the severity of the victim's injuries, the circumstances under which the crime was committed and the age of the victim. If the offender is convicted, the crime will be punishable by a maximum sentence of 12 years in prison. Among its other provisions, the law: Eliminates the felony of sodomy to anyone under age 16, punishing the act only as a misdemeanor. Eliminates the crime of rape by oral copulation for any acts committed before age 18. Makes oral copulation by force or coercion a misdemeanor, regardless of age of the victim. Eliminates the requirement that a victim must affirmatively consent to oral copulation to prove rape. Requires that a victim of indecent penetration or oral copulation by force or coercion be informed of the possible immigration consequences of reporting the crime. Allows a victim's age to be determined through the use of comparative biology. Allows the courts to consider the sophistication and maturity of the child in deciding whether the crime was premeditated. (The Los Angeles Times) The number of child rape cases reported to the California Department of Justice in 2014 had declined by 14% from the year before, compared with a 26% reduction in arrests, according to data released by the department on Thursday. The number of reports to law enforcement peaked at 17,254 in 1990 and was 4,461 last year, said department spokesman Mark T. Olmos. To qualify for a misdemeanor sentence, the crime must involve force, violence, threat of great bodily injury or be done against a victim who is less than 16 years old. In a statement, Brown said the new law, which c6a93da74d
